

OPEN DAY

Dear Patron of the Wiener Staatsoper!

In the 2018/2019 season the Wiener Staatsoper – the opera house with the largest repertoire in the world – will be presenting a wide variety of works of opera and ballet from no fewer than four centuries. And as always the productions include both modern ones and timeless older stagings. However, a number of different departments are necessary and responsible for the fact that such a comprehensive programme is even possible, that the curtain really goes up each day, and that the performance actually can begin, and these departments must work together as precisely as the wheels of a clock.

Once a year – on open day – audiences of the Wiener Staatsoper have an opportunity to take a detailed look behind the scenes, experience the individual departments of the opera house at first hand, participate in the preparations and rehearsals of musicians, singers and dancers, and discover technical secrets – in short, to breathe the air of the theatre.

The open day to which I cordially invite you has once again been timed to coincide with the beginning of the season, as a sort of prelude to the 2018/2019 season which we should like to celebrate with you.

Dominique Meyer
Director of the Wiener Staatsoper
